Project: Clean & Green (Enactus)

The biggest act of giving back to Mata Nature is to compost! How is it useful? You are basically sending your waste back to earth where it recharges it for the next harvest. You get rid of running behind the Gaadi Waala. Your plastic goes to the recyclers, isn't it a win win? You basically do everything right, and if you compost, you are our hero!

Rain water harvesting

The Rainwater Harvesting System implemented at DCAC exemplifies the college's proactive stance on environmental conservation. The campus features a well-functioning rainwater harvesting system at two designated locations—one adjacent to the main college gate and the other at the entrance of the college canteen. Additionally, there is ample storage capacity to collect and utilize rainwater during periods of low rainfall. The system is regularly maintained to ensure its effectiveness.

Landscaping with trees and plants

Trees play an important ecological role within the urban environment, as well as support improved public health and provide aesthetic benefits to cities. In one year, a single mature tree will absorb up to about 22 kgs of carbon dioxide from the atmosphere, and release it as oxygen. The trees & the overall greenery in the campus provide good & soothing visual impact, which also helps to enhance mental health & well-being. The college also has a 'Herb Garden' and a 'Garden of Hope' where samples of our country's flora are planted in an attempt to conserve them. In addition, the college also has over 800 potted plants placed at different locations. Some of the potted plants include Jasmine, Harshingar, Aloe vera, Bougainvillea, Pansies, Croton, marigolds, Euphorbia and different varieties of lilies, palms, roses, ficus, cactus etc.

Due to the high plant diversity, the college attracts a lot of birds such as babblers, sparrows, pigeons, red-vented bulbuls, etc.
